

Quality Instruments

Give Your Child a Fair Chance

Do not demand that your child learn to play the instrument that is available in the family possessions. First, your child may have no desire to play that particular instrument, or may not be physically able to handle it. Second, the instrument probably needs an overhaul because of the long storage period, and, if it is in less than top playing condition, the student will become discouraged quickly and might then give up. So, give your child a fair chance. Invest in quality for your quality child. A quality investment will pay dividends.

The Importance of Quality Instruments

Quality student instruments must be manufactured by a company recognized for excellence in the field. The preservation of time-honored craftsmanship is a priority at United Musical Instruments, where King instruments are made. Pick up a Bach instrument and you hold generations of knowledge and expertise in your hands. Conn/Selmer has a strong commitment to research, development and testing, which result in new instruments, new processes, and new performance features, so that every instrument can perform better than ever before. As a parent, you may also want to know that we build our student instruments with many of the same features and specifications that are included in our professional models, while keeping the price affordable. So remember, Mom and Dad, that a quality instrument, whether you rent or buy, is the best start to success for the promising young musician.

List of Recommended Manufacturers

FLUTES	CLARINETS	SAXOPHONES
Armstrong Emerson Selmer Artley Gemeinhardt	Armstrong Noblet -Vito Artley Selmer	Conn Jupiter Selmer USA Yanagisawa King Selmer Paris Vito
TRUMPETS	FRENCH HORNS	TROMBONES
Bach Holton King Martin Conn Jupiter Leblanc	Bach Holton Conn Jupiter	Bach King Jupiter Conn Holton
STRINGS	DRUMS
Glaesel Knilling Scherl & Roth WM Lewis & Son	Ludwig / Musser

Questions?

Do you still have questions about brands of instruments, please feel free to Music Time at 904-696-9882 and let our professional staff help you.